► Laura hosted Hyundai's press conference to open the Consumer Electronics Show, announcing the company's revolutionary "flying air taxi" and partnership with Uber. But this was no ordinary subject or hosting format. After seamlessly navigating lengthy Korean name pronunciations during introductions, Laura conducted on-stage interviews with each leader from Hyundai and Uber about their role in developing this incredible evolution in transportation. Laura helped boil down a complicated engineering story about a future that might not be so far away into a story the press could follow – resulting in one of the highest levels of media impressions of any CES press conference.

► The theme for this annual conference was Elevate 20/20 with a Blue Angels décor, complete with a flight suit “uniform” for the conference. With heels intact, Laura enjoyed taking on the role of “Flight Director.” Having spent more than eight years closely working with the military in her role as the White House Director of Events (and an Air Show enthusiast herself), this was a dream role. Before kicking off the full show, Laura conducted a serious, and very well received, on-stage interview with the CEO. On the last night she traded in her flight suit for a black-tie formal dress to host the annual awards dinner.

“
